Description: This hike has two very different parts:

The first part runs mainly parallel to a dry riverbed, along a path that meanders at times, or on which you advance at others. The typical landscape (flora and fauna) and the former exploitation of the water by the farmers create a typical landscape that can be found in many other areas of the island.

The second part begins as soon as you reach the Galatzó refuge, where you can observe Ses Cases and how, in the Middle Ages, the large estates were divided among themselves. The final access to the village of Es Capdellà is along the old paths that farmers used to use to reach their daily workplaces.

Tour: Santa Ponça - Torrent - Pas de Sa Mula - Camí des Molí Nou - Finca des Galatzó - Es Capdellà.

Length: 3 hours and a half.

Distance: 12 km.

The Coma de Son Torrella is a plateau at an altitude of about 800 metres, where agriculture used to be practised in the past. An old cart track, perfectly flat, leads to Portell de Sa Costa, a place where you can enjoy the best views of the valley of Soller. Only a small ravine separates the visitor from the next peak, Coll de L'Ofre, from where there are fantastic views of the Cúber reservoir, which looks more like a stretch of the Pyrenees than the mountains of Mallorca.

Tour: Coma de Son Torrella - Portell de Sa Costa - Coll de l'Ofre - Cúber reservoir.

Length: 3 hours and a half.

Distance: 7 km.

Elevation gain: Practically no gradient, small 50 m difference in altitude.

The first historical reference to the path dates back to 1337, to the Act relating to the division of the island after the conquest of King Jaume I. At first, it was a donkey and horse track, which in time became a cart track. It crosses the estates of Menut, Binifaldó, Muntanya, Son Marc and Son Grua. All these properties have hundreds of years of history and show us the special characteristics of mountain estates.
